

How to Use Our Resources

You know your students best, and probably already know a great way to help them connect to our vast resource pool. But if you need a jumping-off point, here are a few things you can point them toward.

Share See Yourself IN content with your students.

Dedicate classroom time to developing strong resumes and interview habits.

Lead conversations with our resources as a guide.

This program places students directly into key industries throughout Indiana, giving them the unique opportunity to get real job experiences that pay before they've graduated, and providing additional clarity as they begin their job search or head off to college. Your students can explore our resources—including interviews and testimonials from students just like them—to help gain insights into appropriate industries.

Setting aside some classroom instruction time to build a resume, write a cover letter, and practice interview skills can go a long way, and our resources can help with that. Besides sharing articles that show young people how to build the perfect resume, we offer podcasts and other materials to help students set themselves apart by learning what industry professionals look for on job applications.

Chances are, your students have a lot of questions. See Yourself IN can help get answers. Before your students start looking for jobs, they need to know what's already out there, and our library of videos, podcasts, and articles are a great place to start. Students can explore these resources on their own time to get an idea of what leading advanced industries in Indiana are looking for in an employee, or you can choose different industries to highlight during class instruction time, giving students the opportunity to ask questions directly or follow up on their own on our resources page. Plus, through Ascend Indiana, one of CICP's branded talent and industry sector initiatives, students have access to even more material to help them in their job search.
